The artwork Amsterdam from the Equine series of Allan Banford delivers a fascinating visual homage to the majestic horse. This series portrays the movements and magnificent postures through intense organic brushes, featuring the energy and individuality of these specimens enhanced by the detail and precision of the ocular cavity. The painting has been executed on a mahogany wood panel, oils and acrylics with a generous matt banish, featured on a double frame gold gilded.

Inspired by the sublime riding horses of The Hollandsche Manege in Amsterdam, the oldest riding school in the Netherlands, dating back to 1744, the artwork Amsterdam symbolizes freedom and power. The painting motivates you to feel vitalized and reminds you to focus on your desired goals, the motion result of the artist technique depicts the sense of progress and growth, this single horse is even so symbolic of being a hero. Thereby, a horse painting represents a sense of victory and triumph. Feng Shui masters recommend hanging a horse painting with the forward direction heads into a home. As it will lead the wealth and luck into your home not flowing away.
